X. Comments:
1. In which areas could the supervisee(s) have been more adequately prepared?

			None come to mind. Loyola students seem to be more prepared than interns from other universities.                  The student needed to develop her identity as counselor more acutely, as she struggled with her translation from theory to practice.                  I feel the supervisees were adequately prepared                  Our intern from the last two years seemed adequately prepared.                  N/A                  Being empathetic and expression of emotions
2. What are the areas where the supervisee(s) were exceptionally prepared?
			Intervention and engagement skills, knowledge of basic counseling techniques, ability to engage with difficult clients, very receptive to feedback, very prepared for supervision meetings.                  The student was very skilled in Ethics and theory.                  professional identity and accepting feedback                  Ability to engage and connect with our students is always a strength.                  Supervisees performed their professional role very well.                  knowledge of theory and basic techniques

			Keep up the great work! As I've only supervised one student from Loyola, I don't feel that my experience is a fair assessment of the program.
